- Engineered for simple, straightforward, fully automatic filtering
- Rugged durability stands up to heavy use year after year
- Easily programable

During normal filtration, untreated water enters the system through an inlet at the top of the media tank. As it seeps down through the filtering bed, foreign particles, unpleasant odors and tastes are trapped and absorbed by the various filtering media, producing treated water.

During the backwash cycle, the flow is reversed. Water flowing upward expands, cleansing the media bed by loosening and carrying away trapped particles.
